St Paul says that love 'is not irritable'. Sometimes we're irritated or angered by others, and we don't know why. Not all irritation stems from sinful or selfish motives, although the irritable treatment of others surely is wrong. Much irritability comes from a love of perfection, a deep desire that programs, meetings, and structures be run perfectly. A desire to run things perfectly can erupt into anger at events or people who get in the way or ruin that desire. Those who are easily irritated need to remember that perfection exists only in God. We need to love God and our fellow Christians, not the visions we have for perfection here on earth. 1 Corinthians 13:5
